Fosnot, the first man up, got a life on an error by the shortstop and stole second. He played off that bug and the pitcher turned around as if to throw the ball to the buseman. The ball did not move and the umpire called it a balk and gave Fosnot a base. During the wrangle that ensued Fornot walked home. In the last inning Cornelison went to third on H. Kirk's two-bagger. When Jones got hold of the ball and a baserunner was to be put out, he brought the ball down on their backs like a thousand of bricks and two Clearwater men went home with bruises on their backs as large as a saucer.

The game was fast throughout. Betch was on the rubber for the locals, while Thompkins and Davis were on the box burding line for the visitors. Betch had the best of the game, striking out fourteen men, while his opponent fanned but seven. Betch was unsteady at times. allowing five men passes to first, white Thompkins and Davis gave but two. In the sighth inning the visitors took a fall out of Betch and did same furious pounding. They liked the style of twisters he dished up and they demanded plenty. In that inning five safe bits were reorded for Clearwater. For eight innings Betch let the visitors down with but six hits and some of these were of the scratchy order. In the eighth H. Kirk went out on a grounder to first. His brother followed with a single to right; Others Tagg singled over second and a base on balls to Thompkins filled the bases.
